Theme: Gratitude, Dream, Education

This stunning and richly illustrated picture book follows Chinese Tajik children on their way to school.

Long before the sun even thinks of rising, the Chinese Tajik children run to school—over the hills, through the rough terrain, across the river, and take the ziplining. Under the bright morning sun, surrounded by the sounds of nature, the eager students journey through the hills and the river to learn the letters, sounds, and words of their beautiful books at school. The compelling story takes readers on a visual journey of Tajik village's various landscapes, both geographical and social. While exposing some of the past-day hardships in Tajik village, the author depicts values such as strength, determination, and a love of learning.

This book provides a grand panorama of the harsh and scarce environment in which the locals live in, which could be used as an opportunity to compare and contrast differences and similarities between the past and now. It could also provide the opportunity for students to reflect on their own daily lives in comparison and contrast with those of the children in the book. We can all learn about what a privilege it is to attend school and how hard it is for some children.

The Turpan Karez System

Written and Illustrated by Xuan Zha

ISBN 978-7-5590-8394-4

Picture Book / Ages 5-10

Hardcover / 260×280mm / 40 pages

March 2022 / ¥48.00

Theme: Travel, Cultural relics, Water irrigation engineering, Agriculture

Sold to: Pakistan

The Turpan Karez System is an important ancient irrigation system that is still used in Turpan, Xinjiang, in Northwest China. This is a first picture book about the tunnel system providing water for local people to drink as well as to water their crops, which shows how locals dug wells and tunnels to transfer water from mountains miles away to their farmland.

The Turpan Karez Water System is an impressive hydraulic engineering project as well as a cultural achievement. Because the karez system has provided a safe and reliable water supply over 2000 years, the communities that rely on it have referred to it as the “mother river” and “spring of life.” As the great irrigation project initiated by the ancient people, it is a great undertaking which benefits both the contemporaries and later generations.

This cheerful book offers an enticing introduction to the system that helped to make the Turpan area an oasis on the Silk Road route and make Turpan an important fruit and vegetable growing area.

The Great Epics: Janger

There are 14 books in this series and the stories are based on the national culture of minority nations. As one of the greatest minority epics, the Mongolian epic Janger has a great reputation with the other two epics Manas and Gesar. It is just like the Homer's Epic in Greek and Ramayana in India, it's the spiritual wealth of all human kind. Janger has been passed down orally among the folk for a long time. We illustrated the story of Janger and his companion in exquisite pictures and make this great epic interesting for children. The main stories in these books are Janger and his 12 commanders fighting for their people, protecting their homes and defending their country...
